During this Spring 2008 seminar series, faculty and students from two Chinese higher education institutions will engage their Minnesota colleagues in Web-enabled, live, and asynchronous discussions on LeapFrog futures applied to youth capital development.

The LeapFrog Paradigm enables us to create youth capital improvements by importing “distant futures” directly into the present.

Join students, scholars and guests from the University of Minnesota and our broader community to discuss LeapFrog futures for Chinese and U.S. American youth. Special emphasis will be placed on expanding learning opportunities across the full spectrum of education, work and life. You are invited to participate in this international LeapFrog activity.

YOUR PARTICIPATION WILL:

- Help Formulate new Youth Capital Development Relationships among colleges, schools, families, work places, and communities within both countries...and beyond.
- Help define the potentials of Technology-enabled non-formal and informal learning for including youth in innovative Chinese and American workforces
- Help evaluate the immediate LeapFrog possibilities of Web-enabled hand-held devices as 24/7 learning tools.
